

As the world progresses and technology advances, it is important that we as a nation stick to our core values. We believe in competition, and while it is true that in theory government involvement should promote competition, in this situation we are faced with the reality that ISPs will control internet access as if they have a monopoly. We have laws in place to prevent monopolies, and the internet is no different. In this day and age many people are required to have internet access for work or school, making it a necessity. This means that it needs to stay a title II. It can not and should not be up to the CEOs of some company to decide what internet we see, it is our decision. By not keeping the internet fair and open you are violating first amendment freedoms, as you are allowing companies to censor speech that they deem unsuitable. This is absurd. The internet is a free and open space, an embodiment of the free market. And monopolies are not part of the free market. The fact of the matter is that these ISPs have the power to control, but it is up to you to prevent this from happening. It is in your hands but please listen to the people, not your wallets because eventually it will come back to bite you.
